Of Primary Interest

Courses in women's studies offered by other departments are cross-listed below. Those listed first focus centrally on the study of women and/or gender. Courses listed as "Of Related Interest" devote at least one specific segment to such questions. Many of the courses may be taken for graduate credit. Courses numbered in the 200s are primarily for graduate students. Students should also investigate offerings in other faculties in which they may cross-register, such as the Graduate School of Education, the Law School, and the Women's Studies program at the Divinity School. Students may be particularly interested in the following courses: the Divinity School: 2434, 2880, 1468, 3455, 3525; the Medical School: Social Medicine 720; the Law School offers courses in family law, employment rights, and adoption, which presuppose a legal background.
